

The Eternal Flame

Sapere Aude
(Dare to be Wise)

Sapere aude - Latin for "dare to be wise", resonates with a seeking for the eternal flame, a symbiotic form of eternal life.

Questions abound throughout all religions regarding the eternal flame, and yet the simplistic truth awaits each of us, beyond religions and human belief. How does one reach that truth, with an unfaltering understanding?

To state it as "The Eternal Truth" is another way to describe the flame itself. For truth, our divine truth, is found within, constantly glowing, like a flame, whose strength and power cannot be moved.

A proper identification occurs in an alignment with ones divine being. The "dare to be wise" surfaces, sometimes as a doubt and other times as a statement, demanding the living of ones divineness.

This is "The Eternal Truth - The Eternal Flame" urging the oneness of existence with the divine. Only choices stop ones identification as such. And, only choices advance our identification with the divine consciousness.

Select "The Eternal Flame" as oneness, perfection, limitless, goodness, allness, and enter the truth of being.

Spiritually we see and discern as truth would see, wholeness. Spiritually we hear and discriminate by listening within to the heart, the soul, the still small voice which is within all, which is the eternal knowing. This is the spiritual perception so necessary to our being.

Our being is ever-present and eternal, since it is our divineness. It is timeless, infinite being, a flame of knowledge conforming to itself.

The is “The Eternal Flame”. Dare to be wise. The choice is yours.

A simple inspirational poem by the author;

The Eternal Flame is truth.
Where divine consciousness reigns
and where being is perfect.
A oneness of light.
Forever glowing, giving,
loving as itself,
limitless,
and
flowing with goodness, serene as being.
What is hidden becomes visible, as you.
